

The Card Library

Legends • Atlas of Kings • Hall of Persian Words • Wonders of Persia

WHAT'S INSIDE

Legends (42 cards): the kings, heroes, villains, and creatures of the Shahnameh, each with its story, bloodline, Who Am I? clues, and a discussion question. Atlas of Kings (15 cards): the places of the epic, from Mount Damavand to Persepolis. Hall of Persian Words (55 cards): Persian script, pronunciation, and meaning. Wonders of Persia (18 cards): trivia questions from 3,000 years of Persian history, tagged by era: Age of Empires, Golden Age, and Age of Poets.

WAYS TO PLAY

The library is a toolkit, not a rulebook. Here are some ways to start, and every new deck adds more. Who Am I? One reader holds a Legends or Atlas card and reads the clues aloud, hardest first. Guess after clue one for 3 points, clue two for 2, clue three for 1. Sort the Court. Shuffle the Legends deck and race to sort cards into kings, heroes, villains, and creatures. Build the Bloodline. Use the Bloodline lines to lay out family trees on the table: connect Sam to Zal to Rostam to Sohrab. Word Match. Lay Word cards script-side up and take turns recalling the meaning before flipping. Wonders Quiz Night. Ask the Wonders questions across the table; first correct answer keeps the card. Story Chains. Draw three cards and tell one story that truthfully connects all three. Epic Lands Quest. Put a map in the middle: the Epic Lands map at epicofkings.com, or any map of the region. Draw an Atlas card, solve the Where Am I? clues, then find the place on the map. Score a bonus point for naming a character or event connected to it. Timeline of Kings. Pull out the twelve King cards and lay them in the order they reigned, from the first king to the last. The card numbers are the answer key, so cover the corners while you play. For a harder round, shuffle in heroes and place each one in the age of the king they served, then check yourselves against the Timeline of Kings on the site.

PRINTING

This edition is duplex-ready: each page of card fronts is followed by its matching page of backs. Print double-sided, flipping on the long edge, on cardstock if possible, then cut along the gold borders. Content follows the Shahnameh of Ferdowsi; spellings match epicofkings.com.

A SACRED OATH

Breaking a Peyman is one of the gravest acts a hero or king can commit. Oaths define the moral code of the epic.

WORD 53 OF 55

EPICOFKINGS.COM

NAM

نام

NAME, REPUTATION

One of the epic's most sacred ideas. A hero lives and dies for their Nam; losing it is worse than death.

WORD 52 OF 55

EPICOFKINGS.COM

RAZM

رزم

BATTLE, COMBAT

The central arena of the Shahnameh. Where there is Razm, there is fate.

WORD 55 OF 55

BAZM

بزم

A ROYAL FEAST

The joyful twin of Razm. Heroes who fight by day feast by night, and a great king is judged by how he holds both.

WONDER 4 OF 18 EPIC OF KINGS

ABOUT 44 PERCENT

Historians estimate the empire was home to roughly 49 million people, about 44% of everyone alive at the time. No empire before or since has ruled a larger share of humanity.

THE CYRUS CYLINDER

When Cyrus the Great conquered Babylon, he let exiled peoples return to their homelands and worship their own gods, and recorded his decree on a clay cylinder. Among those freed were the Jews of Babylon, and the Bible even calls Cyrus the Lord's anointed. A replica of the cylinder sits in the UN headquarters in New York to this day.

AL-KHWARIZMI

Known as the father of algebra, al-Khwarizmi (800-850 CE) wrote the book whose title gave algebra its name, and his own name gave us the word algorithm. Every math class owes him a thank you!

ZOROASTRIANISM

Founded by the prophet Zoroaster, it is one of the world's oldest religions and among the very first centered on one supreme God. Many scholars believe it influenced Judaism, Christianity, and Islam.

AVICENNA

The Persian doctor Avicenna wrote The Canon of Medicine around 1025 CE. He described diseases spreading through contaminated water and soil, centuries before anyone had heard the word germ.

BIRUNI

Using careful observation and pure mathematics, Biruni calculated the size of the Earth with astonishing accuracy. He even seriously debated whether the Earth itself moves, centuries before Copernicus.

THE CHAPAR KHANEH

The world's first relay postal system, with fresh horses every 25 km across the empire. Herodotus wrote those famous words about its couriers, and they are carved above New York City's main post office to this day.

THE YAKHCHAL

يخچال

Ancient Persians built underground domed structures that kept ice and food cold even in scorching desert heat. Yakh means ice, and the Persian word for refrigerator is still yakhchal today!

WONDER 12 OF 18 EPIC OF KINGS

JUST 7 DAYS

With fresh horses stationed along the route from Sardis to Susa, royal messengers covered in a week what took ordinary travelers 90 days on foot. It was the fastest communication network the ancient world had seen.

THE WINDMILL

Persians invented the world's first practical windmills around 500-900 CE, using a vertical-axis design entirely their own, to grind grain and pump water on the windy Persian plateau.

PERSIAN (FARSI)

فارسی

One of the world's oldest continuously spoken languages. Unlike Latin, Persian is very much alive: some 130 million people speak it today in almost the same form Ferdowsi wrote a thousand years ago.

QANATS

Underground aqueducts, some 70 km long, brought water from distant mountains to desert cities. Amazingly, some qanats are still in use today, three thousand years after they were built.
